LAMB

All of the lambs that we offer are born and raised on our home farm. During the first 6-8 weeks they are left to nurse with their mother, providing the best nutrients and antibodies.

After this time, they are weaned from the ewe and fed a rotation of grain and hay until they reach a desirable weight for processing. All of our lambs are grown with no-added hormones and kept indoors where we can ensure they are dry and safe from predators or parasites.

BEEF

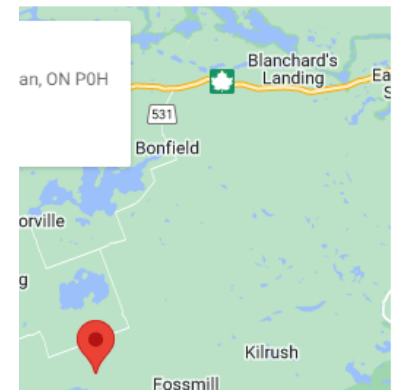

Our quality beef is grown with no hormones and grass fed throughout the life of the calves that we grow are born on our farm or grass-fed calves from local farms. Throughout the year, the cows and their calves graze the northern hills, receiving all the nutrients they need. In the fall, the calves are weaned from their mothers and fed high quality hay. Three months before they are ready to be processed, they are fed a special diet that helps with the marbling and tenderness of the meat. If any calf needs medical attention, they are nurtured back to health and not sold for human consumption. All of our beef on our farm are processed when they are 18 months or younger when processed, so that each cut is as tender as possible.
